Charlotte, NC – May 20, 2014– Charlotte Community Health Clinic today announced it was awarded the Leadership Charlotte Legacy Award in Community Service. The awards breakfast was held on May 8th at the Hilton Charlotte Center City.

“I am proud of the great work that happens each and every day at the Charlotte Community Health Clinic. We have an amazing team of staff and volunteers committed to improving the quality of life for so many in our community by providing access to health care,” said Amy Chiou, Charlotte Community Health Clinic board member. “I am thrilled that the Clinic received the 2014 Community Service Award from Leadership Charlotte in recognition of its efforts and dedication.”

The Community Service Award is given to an organization that has enriched and improved the quality of life in the community through its creativity and innovation in community service. Charlotte Community Health Clinic is honored and thankful to be recognized through such an acknowledgement. About this achievement Clinic Executive Director Nancy Hudson said, “It is an honor to be awarded the Legacy Award in Community Service. The Clinic meets a great need by engaging a great community to serve our neighbors who are without health care.”

About Charlotte Community Health Clinic

Charlotte Community Health Clinic improves the health of the community by providing quality, accessible health services to low-income and uninsured children and adults who live in Mecklenburg County. Founded in 2000 by a group of community volunteers, the Clinic offers primary care, behavioral health services, and health and wellness education. With the support of community partners, healthcare providers, donors, and volunteers, the Clinic bridges the gap to health and wellness for those without other means of medical care. In 2013, the Clinic provided over 20,700 patient encounters and increased the number of patients served by over 1,300 from the previous year.
